Stevenson, Bryan. Just Mercy: A Story of Justice and Redemption. One World, 2014.

The author was a young lawyer when he founded the Equal Justice Initiative, a legal practice dedicated to defending those most desperate and in need: the poor, the wrongly condemned, and women and children trapped in the farthest reaches of our criminal justice system. One of his first cases was that of Walter McMillian, a young man who was sentenced to die for a notorious murder he insisted he didn't commit. The case drew the author into a tangle of conspiracy, political machination, and legal brinkmanship and transformed his understanding of mercy and justice forever.

Syphax, Tracey D and Detric "Qadiriyyah" Goss. From the Block to the Boardroom: The Tracy D. Syphax Story. Self-published, 2012.

As an ex-offender, the author related that the road to starting his own multi-million dollar enterprise was one littered with obstacles that would have discouraged many people but became rungs on his ladder to success. His transition from the "block to the boardroom" was one that made him a friend, enemy, mentor and role model. While the construction and real estate business ultimately made him a millionaire on paper, his dealings in the past cost him plenty. This book gives the reader a first-hand look at how the author changed his life.

Ward, Andre A. A Guide to Right Thinking for Reentry: A Comprehensive Study Guide for the Presently and Formerly Incarcerated. Andor Publishing, 2018.

For many people, being incarcerated and then released from jails or prisons is something that often presents challenges. While incarcerated, people cope with the feeling of being away from those they care about and love; reflect on the actions that led them to being incarcerated; and ultimately face the fact that one day they will return to society. Then, upon release, the formerly incarcerated person has to reconnect or connect with family or others; navigate social systems; and become acquainted with a new way of living, all of which requires a new way of thinking. A Guide to Right Thinking for Reentry offers a simple yet comprehensive way to develop and maintain the right kind of thinking both during incarceration and upon release, so that one can live a positive and productive life.

Western, Bruce. Homeward: Life in the Year After Prison. Russell Sage Foundation, 2018.

In Homeward, sociologist Bruce Western examines the tumultuous first year after release from prison. Drawing from in-depth interviews with over one hundred individuals, he describes the lives of the formerly incarcerated and demonstrates how poverty, racial inequality, and failures of social support trap many in a cycle of vulnerability despite their efforts to rejoin society. Western concludes that boosting the social integration of former prisoners is key to both ameliorating deep disadvantage and strengthening public safety. He advocates policies that increase assistance to those in their first year after prison, including guaranteed housing and health care, drug treatment, and transitional employment.

Wilson, Chris. The Master Plan: My Journey from Life in Prison to a Life of Purpose. G. P. Putnam's Sons, 2019.

Growing up in a tough Washington, D.C., neighborhood, Chris Wilson was so afraid for his life he wouldn't leave the house without a gun. One night, defending himself, he killed a man. At eighteen, he was sentenced to life in prison with no hope of parole. But what should have been the end of his story became the beginning. Deciding to make something of his life, Chris embarked on a journey of self-improvement--reading, working out, learning languages, even starting a business. He wrote his Master Plan: a list of all he expected to accomplish or acquire. He worked his plan every day for years, and in his mid-thirties he did the impossible: he convinced a judge to reduce his sentence and became a free man
